Klæ Construction had to hoist the building materials over the four-story structures during the renovation of the four interior courtyards for Mountain View Crossing in Wayne, N.J.

Courtyard Renovations

Mountain View Crossing recently chose Klæ Construction to renovate all four of its secure interior open-air courtyards. Totalling 73,600-square-feet, the demolition and reconstruction process required all materials to be hoisted over the four-story structures. The renovations consisted of a pool restoration, addition of a splash pool, bathhouse extension featuring timber trusses, and a new pool equipment building.

All of the courtyards received new stone veneer planters, landscaping which included an irrigation system, low voltage decorative lighting, new pole lights, decorative aluminum railings, and an ornamental resurfacing of the concrete decks. The larger courtyards now contain new pergolas and gazebos, fire pits and barbecue stations. All work was accomplished "off season" and will be ready for the next swimming season.
